We need not say how all this ended The years of anxiety and alarm, of desoand despair, which formed the melancholy sequel of this fictitious afflunce and these delusive hopes, can never be forgotten.

And even when those years had rolled away; when the storm of our adversity had exhausted its violence; when the colonists began to see that all was not lost, that property still had its value, and industry its rewards; when confidence began gradually to return, and the aspect future to brighten—there mained a cause of deep apprehension to many, and of painful solicitude to all. The affairs of the Bank of Australia were still involved in dreadful complication, and threatened another ca-tastrophe, of which it was impossible to foresee the end, or to calculate the On each of the last five or ravages. six New Years' Days, our congra-tulations upon the improving state of the country were subdued by the recollection of that yet impending storm. And we congratulate the colonists at large on the novel act, that not one dark cloud now lours on their monetary horizon.

As regards its material interests, New South Wales was never in a sounder condition than it is this day. Wild speculation is a thing unknown. A dishonoured bill would be a Our commercial reports show that business is conducted on true and solid principles, and with an amount of success all the better for being moderate. Our advices from home show that our as the active have staple exports, rapidly as they increase in quantity, and active as is the competition they have to encounter from other parts of the world, barely keep pace with the increase of consumption, and are consequently in brisk demand, and realise remunerative prices. These advices show, morcover, that, so far as the commercial future can e discerned by experienced minds, there is every reason to believe that this favourable state of the British market will continue throughout the present year. And, while the commercial and pastoral interests of the colony are thus buoyant, its mechanical interests also are more pro-sperous than they had been during the revious ten years. The operative classes, cenerally speaking, are in full work, with comforts of life being plentiful, and on the whole comparatively cheap, it may be said with truth that in no part of the world are these classes better off than they are here; it might, perhaps, be added, that in no other country are

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT .- TUESDAY. BEFORE their Honors the three Judges. IN THE MATTER OF THUBLOW. - APPLICATION

Sir Alpaed Stephen, C.J.: Having already decided in this case, that it was the duty of Mr. Peden, as the Councillor applied to for that purpose by Mr. Thurlow, to have administered to the latter the eath and declaration required by law in that behalf, (Corporation Act., v. 40.) if Mr. Thurlow was then the legally elected Mayor, and that Mr. Thurlow's appropriate remedy in the matter is by Mandanus, in the first instance, in order to compel the performance of that act, because he will otherwise be unable to enter upon the duties of his office, the question remaining for decision is, whether Mr. Thurlow must be deemed and taken to have been so elected:—a question which involves necessarily two others; first, whether the return of Mr. Hill, who had the majority of votes, was illegal; white the tentire election, or affected the return only, and entitled Mr. Thurlow, as the candidate having the greatest number of legal votes, to be substituted in his place.

First, was Mr. Hill's return illegal? We are all clearly of opinion that it was. It is not more an established principle of law, than of natural justice, that no man shall be in the same matter both party and judge. 'Nemo sibi esse judex, vel suis jus dicere debet.' On this principle, persons entitled to hold any Court of exclusive jurisdiction, can nevertheless not preside there, either in person or by deputy, if in any manner interested in the case referred to him, the award will be set aside. On the same principle, a Sheriff cannot FOR A MANDAMUS.
Sir Alfred Stephen, C.J.: Having already the case referred to him, the award will be a the case referred to him, the award will be set aside. On the same principle, a Sheriff cannot even act ministerially in the execution of a writ, where he is interested in the matter; but the writ must be directed to elisors, or to the Coroner. If a decision be arrived at by Magiatrates in Sessions, of whom any one was interested, it will be illegal; although a majority would still exist, without counting the objectionable vote. (1 Q. B. 479—Case of the Cheltenham Magiatrates.) On the same principle, too, or at least (1 Q. B. 479—Case of the Cheltenham Magustrates.) On the same principle, too, or at least in conformity with it, is the well known rule, that no Returning Officer can be elected a member of the House of Commons, for the County, Borough, or Town, for which he acts, or to which he sends his precept, as such Officer.

Now, here, Mr. Hill was at the same time Returning Officer and Candidate. His duty was not merely ministerial; though, for the most part, it certainly was so, The Aldermen and Assessors, for instance r. 26, are to take was not merely ministerial; though, for the most part, it certainly was so. The Aldermen and Assessors, for instance r. 26, are to take the votes; and the Mayor's duties under the 27th and 29th sections, al'hough he has to appoint polling Clerks, and decide between candidates, in certain casses, by drawing lots, can searcely be said to be of a judicial character. But, by the 30th section, he has power to reject voting papers, where any of the names therein shall be (that is, shall in his judgment be) not intelligibly expressed; an authority, however unimportant, which is beyond all doubt judicial. We are not prepared to hold, however, that the Mayor could be a candidate, even were his duties strictly ministerial. The ground on which the exclusion of every such Officer rests, from being a candidate for Parliament, where the writ is directed to him, has been stated to be, the power and influence which his position confers on him; a reason not less cogent, in cases where he is again a compositor for his own office.

on him; a reason not less cogent, in cases where he is again a competitor for his own office.

But there are reasons in this case for hold ing, on the ordinary rules of construction applicable to enactments, that the Mayor for the time being was not intended by our Legislature, to become a competitor for re-election. Not only in the case of Councillors, s. 19, and Aldermen, s. 22, who are to "go out of office" at stated periods, but in the case of Assessors, and Auditors, s. 34, who are to "continue in office" men, a. 22, who are to "go out of office" at stated periods, but in the case of Assessors, and Auditors, s. 34, who are to "continue in office" one year, or until successors be elected, (precisely the language used in s. 25, respecting the Mayor's term of office), there is an express provision for re-election. In the case of the Mayor, there is no such provision. On what principle can we say, that this softcary omission was undesigned: The Legislature had the previous Acts, for regulating the affairs of the Corporation, under review at the moment, for they are referred to. But, in one of those Acts, the 6 Vict. No. 3. s. 46, the capacity of re-election is conferred. The Legislature, therefore, did not think such a provision superfluous, where re election was intended; and its omission in the new Act, consequently, is the more marked and striking. It cannot be attributed, consistently with any sound principle of construction, to oversight or accident, under such circumstances; or to any opinion, that such a provision was unnecessary. accident, under such circumstances; or to any opinion, that such a provision was unnecessary. Had we found an express enactment, that the Mayor might be again elected, and no enactment providing a substitute for the discharge, in such a case, of his official duties, we might have been led to hold, notwithstanding their apparent incompatibility, that the two characters of Declaring or Returning Officer, and Candidate, were sustainable by him, by reason of the necessity of the thing; lest the intention of the Legislature should be frustrated. But when, as in the Electoral Act, 6 Vict. No. 16, s. 4, the Legislature contemplated the possibility of the Mayor's becoming a candidate, for an office to which he was to declare the election, they took care to make provision for a substitute. for a substitute.

the election, they took care to make provision for a substitute.

The question on which we have felt more difficulty, is that which respects the position of Mr. Thurlow; who had the greatest number of votes, next after Mr. Hill. It by no means follows, as of course, that, because the latter gentleman could not, he being Mayor, return or declare his own election, therefore the election fell on Mr. Thurlow. The rule of law is, that, where the incapacity of the returned Candidate was known, by notice previously given, all votes thereafter polled for him are thrown away:—they are as if polled for a person not existing, and consequently are mere nullities. In such a case, therefore, the person numerically second on the poll is, in legal contemplation, the first. The point for determination is, whether the condition as to notice extends to any other than matters of fact; or, in effect, whether, in a case of this kind where the incapacity depends on matter of law, reconfederia not considered to the condition of the province of the property in a case of this kind where the incapacity depends on matter of law, knowledge is not equivalent to notice.

s where the incapacity depends on matter of law, knowledge is not equivalent to notice.

The same question, indeed, as to the efficacy of knowledge, extends to matters of fact which are notorious; and of which, the parties voting must have been cognizant. Thus, for example, could it have been necessary to give the voters no ice, 'the' Mr. Hill was 'Mayor?' or could they, as members of the Corporation, voting for that gentleman, have been ignorant that he was Mayor? We think that notice of such a fact, to men voting in that character, was quite unnecessary; and that to have given it, would have been absolutely idle and absurd. Every one must have known the fact beforehand; and the reason, therefore, for giving notice in such cases, fails. But, although the voters for Mr. Hill may have known that he was Mayor, they did not know (as it was urged) that he was for that reason ineligible, in point of law; and notice of this, therefore, at any rate, should have been given. We are of opinion, that no such notice was necessary. It is a well established principle, the soundness and wisdom of which we need not here turn aside to vindicate, that every man must be taken to know it; but we cannot predicate this, in sny case, of any one—and, were the inquiry necessary in one case, it would be equally so in all.

know the law. In point of fact, many may not know it; but we cannot predicate this, in any case, of any one—and, were the inquiry necessary in one case, it would be equally so in all. Justice could not be administered, subject to such a condition; and, in truth, in the wast majority of instances, the fact never could be determined either way. But, if we were morally persuaded, in the present case, that few of Mr. Hill's voters knew of the disability in question, we should still think it far better to encounter the disappointment, and inconveniences, te which our decision may perhaps lead, than to violate a principle so necessary, and of which the application is so extensive, that it will be found to pervade almost every branch and department of the law.

We are constrained to hold, therefore, that Mr. Hill's position as Mayor, and his ineligibility as a candidate, while discharging the duties of that office in regard to the election, must be taken to have been known to his voters; and that, consequently, the only to his voters; and that, consequently, the only

If such notice be not required and given, one If such notice be not required and given, one vote thus obtained would be available for securing the election to the party obtaining it, against one thousand; but before such a minority (which it would be a mere mockery to regard as declaratory of the sense of the citicans) should prevail, it is but just and reasonable that notice of the ineligibility of the ineligible candidate should be given,—as thereby parties may be prevented from throwing away their votes in favour of a party who could not the plantiff and the defendant to enter into the purpose of closing the transaction between them.

entered upon the office, and that therefore the inhabitants, knowing that the party was assessor, it may be presumed, were bound to know he was ineligible, yet Lord Denman, though directing for another reason that the quo tourranto information should issue, said, "Undoubtedly notice of disqualification ought to be given, for if that were not done, a party might be slipped in at the last moment, and be returned by a single vote on account of some objection to another candidate not disclosed at the election." Here then, not withstanding the general principle that every one is presumed to know the law, and the presumption draws strength from its clear, plain, and express terms—yet Lord Denman intimated that this did not dispense with the notice of the disqualification is limited to mere matters of fact, but am of opinion where the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a statutory one,—the statute and the fact out of which the disqualification is a

The decision of the Court, therefore, was, that the mandamus which had been applied for must be issued.

The applicant's counsel asked for costs, but their Honors declined to make any such order. The practice, it was said, was not to allow costs in cases where parties concerned appeared, as in the country of the practice, the same said, was not to allow costs in cases where parties concerned appeared, as in the country of the said of the country of the said of the country of the said of the country of the count in cases where parties concerned appeared, as in this present instance, to act bond fide, and in purfect good faith. So far from Mr. Peden having acted improperly, it was remarked by one of their Honors (Mr. Justice Dickinson) that if he, the Judge, had been in Mr. Peden's place, he should have acted in precisely the same manner. The Chief Justice also remarked, that there was no intention on the part of the Court to cast the slightest imputation upon Mr. Hill. That gentleman appeared to have acted honourably and with perfect good faith. The error into which he had fallen was one upon mere principles of law, which he was one upon mere principles of law, which he could not be expected to determine; and if he had resigned his office before the election, there could be little doubt that he would have been returned by the same majority of the citizens.

This was a scire factors. The declaration was upon a judgment for £164 4s. 10d. To this defendant had pleaded that, after the judgment alluded to, and before the issue of the soi. fa., he paid plaintiff a sum of £35 on account, when it was agreed between them, that a demand which defendant had against plaintiff for a large sum of money, (to wit, £100) for work and isbour as an attorney, should also go as payment on account, and that defendant should perform certain other works of the same character without payment, so as to satisfy the remainder of plaintiff's claim. The plea went on to allege defendant's rendiness and wi lingness to perform this additional work, and concluded with the usual verification.

The plea had been demurred to upon the

The ples had been demurred to upon the ground that it disclosed no good defence in law; and that the agreement relied upon was void, as had a tendency to promote and encourage litigation.

Mr. BROADBURST, for the demurrer, contended that no such plea as this was any answer to the action upon a specialty. It was a plea of accord withouts a isfaction, and the agreement which had been pleaded was one which could not be sustained, because under such an understanding it would be the interest both of the plaintiff and the defendant to enter into litigation for the purpose of closing the transjourned second meeting. The insolvent was examined on behalf of a creditor, and the meeting terminated. CITY COUNCIL

The advantages which this meter possesses over all others are, its correctess and durability; and that unless those points are found and maintained to the highest degree, the instrument falls altogether in its object. are secondary and sactery less important essentials obtained in this meter, viz., security from fraud either by the supplier or consumer, asfety in escape, economy in pine, protection from change of temperature.

As regards its correctness, a glance at the annexed testimonials will carry conviction to the mind of the most sceptical; and on the score of durability, a great triumph has been obtained in the case of the two large meters at the Thames Tunnel, which have been in uninterrupted action night and day for upwards of seven years, being equal to more than fifty years of ordinary use. Their registration is recorded daily, and found to be inflexibly correct; independently of these many have been in ordinary use for sight years, to the highest satisfaction of company and consumer.

Sir,—I have great pleasure in giving my restimony to the excellence of your Dry Meter, and think there is no comparison between that and the Water Meter as regards the value of the two iostruments. Experience confirms this opinion, as I have had several hundreds of them at work for nearly five years with the utmost success. They are perfect in regulation, have no undulation on the lights, are free from the action of frost, and, above all, require no attention when once fixed. I have taken down several that have been at work for the above time, and on testing them found they registered as correctly as when first fixed. I am confident I cannot say too much in their praise, and that all Gas Propristors, who furnish pure gas, would find it to their interest to tion, have no undulation on the lights, are free from the action of frost, and, above all, require no attention when once fixed. January 1, 1849,

Sir,—I feel no hesitation in offering my testimony to the efficiency of your "Dry Gas Meter," more particularly as I have now had on opportunity of examining it repeatedly in its operations at our Institution during the last eight years.

In the course of my long experience in testing the various gas-burners that have fallen under my observation, your "Experimental Meter" has been of the utmost service to me, not only from the accuracy of its results, but from the abridgement of time in arriving at a correct estimate of the quantity of gas consumed, even to the 1-60th part of 1-10th of a cubic foot.

Gas Meyer for the House of Parlia Ment.—A view was yesterday afforded to a number of scientific persons, and others integrated in the consumption of gas, at Messra, Glover's iron-foundry, Drury Lane, of the immense meter constructed and cast under the a superintendence of Mr. Defries, of 67, Et. Martin's Lane, the inventor and patentee. This machine, which is to be placed in the Save Palace at Westminster, is an almost stupendous piece of mechanism, being upwards of 10 feet in height and 20 feet in circumference or girth; it is in form a sexagon, the designs are in the Gothic manner, and in exact keeping with the interior of the new Houses of Parliament, so that it is an ornamental as well as a useful addition to them, and ought to be placed so as to be seen by the public. The machine weighs four tons, and is of espacity to pass 10,000 feet of gas per hour, and of supplying 2600 lights with, secording to calculation, the loss of only half a tenth of pressure; at which pressure it will work with the greatest which pressure it will work with the greatest which pressure are very simple, and yet very accurate. As I had understood that the comparative merits of the Wet and Dry Meters had been conversed in other places, and that the trial about to be made at the Tunuel would probably be on a larger scale than classwhere, I requested Mr. Solitock, the Engineer of the Ratilife Gas Company, to give notice to the maker of the Wet and the their standard of the Wet and the standard of the Solitock, the Engineer of the Ratilife Gas Company, to give notice to the Maker of the Wet Meter that such comparisons is not seen that the standard of the Solitock, the Engineer of the Ratilife Gas Company, to give notice to the Maker of the Wet Meter that the Comparisons is not been present when a given quantity of Gas as was passed through one of your Meters in a given time, which, asfers I could judge, proved the correctness of their registration; but, without giving any opinion upon the principle of the Meter, I apprehend the above statement will be a sufficient proof that the Dry Meter is more advantageous to the consumer than the Wet one.

And us the colony is at present passing through a crisis of transcendent importance to its future welfare, while the interests with which I am myself identified, in connection with Academical Education on the one hand, and with Immigration on the one hand, and with Immigration on the other—interests for which, as is well known, I have made great personal sacrifices and incurred considerable obligations—urgently require the advocacy of the Press at this moment, it is my intention to do so in a somewhat similar way once more. Arrangements have accordingly been made for the publication of a Weekly Journal, to be designated The Press, of the general form and character of the late Colonist and Colonial Observer Newspacers; the first number to be published on Wednesday, the first of January next. The objects that will be kept more particularly, although by no means exclusively, in view, in the proposed Weekly Journsl, will be as follows; viz.—

2. - o prevent the establishment of a penal settlement, or convict colony, on any part of the east coast of this continent—an object which Imperial selfishness, in o. opination with colonial cupidity, is at present labouring to effect—and to hasten the entire discontinuance of transportation to Van Diemen's Land.

3. To combine the energies of the reputable and enlightened portion of the inhabitants of this colony is support of some rational soheme of extensive immigration from Grest Britain and Ireland, so as to ensure the rapid development of the vast resources of the colony, and to leave the advocaces for the resumption of transportation to any part of this territory without excuse; and

4. To unite all the colonies of the Australian group, with the exception of the penal colony of Western Australia, in a series of energetic efforts for their common defence against Imperial injustice, as well as for their general advancement as a great Federation of United Provinces, having common interests and common objects—the nucleus of one great Australian nation, evidently destined to be the leading power of the Southern Hemisphere,

As a Weekly Journal, of the form and character of the one proposed, cannot reckon upon that amount of public support, in the way of advertisements, which would in all likelihood be granted to a Daily Paper under the same editorial management, its price will require to be correspondingly greater. The subscription, as in the case of the late Colonist and Colonial Observer, will therefore be six shillings and six-pence per quarter. But although, like as in the case of the late Colonist and Colonist Observer, will therefore be six shillings and six-pence per quarter. But although, like these papers also, it will commence with eight pages of letter-press weekly, it is intended that another half-sheet, which will increase it to twelve, shall be added shortly without increas-ing the price. Intelligent and practical men, who have Intelligent and practical men, who have strongly recommended and encouraged the proposed undertaking, are very confident that it will pay its own expenses from the first. This, indeed, must, under existing circumstance, be the necessary condition of its existence. It is hoped, therefore, that intending subscribers will not object to pay—at least for the first quarter, till the experiment can be fairly made—in advance; as the printer must be paid weekly.

Copies of this address will be left at the residences of the citizens of Sydney generally, by Mr. Edward Ferris, and Mr. Wilkins W. Wilkins, who will call personally in a day of two to receive the names of intending subscribers. Further particulars will appear in a future advertisement.

Register 139 tons, new measurement; burthen
230 tons, with all spars, seils, boats, brass guns, and other equipments, as per inventory.
This magnificent chooner was constructed guns, and other equipments, as per inventory. This magnificent rehooner was constructed at Newcastle on-Tyne under very able superintendence, as a yacht, for the BMPROR OF RUSSIA. She is a beautiful model, and is built on a new resole. Her dimensions are 103 feet between perpendiculars, 98 feet keel, 26 feet 9 inches beam, and depth of hold 11 feet 7 inches. She is fitted up with three compartment divided by water tight bulk-heads, similar to those on board the Hunter River steamers. Her inventory of atores is equal if not superior to one of her Mrjesty's ships; and her passages are the best proof of her excellent sailing qualities.

Many instances can be adduced where she has made the most remarkable passages on record. She has been competed with by the yachts of the Commander of Maits, and other finst-class vessels, with the invariable result of far outstripping them, whether in running or beating: she has been worked a distance of 2000 miles without any ballast, affording a pretty good proof of her stiffaces under canves; and on another occasion she Beat ROUND CAPE HORN IN THE DEPTH OF WINTER, with her boats in the waist, and re ched Valorgaiso without
